ACTOR AND WRITER CHARLES BUSCH HOSTS THIS MONTH'S EPISODE, "GENDER REVOLUTION"

Our society has always had rigid ideas about what gender should be. Quite simply, it is, to most, male or female. But for others, male and female are not so clearly defined. In 1996, In the Life first aired "Gender Warriors," where those with a passion for personal expression, truth, and education are highlighted.

Same-sex marriage is a hot-button issue both nationwide and within the gay community. How is it that Betty married Hellen six years ago? In "Heterosexual Privilege," we hear from this couple and learn about their remarkable relationship.

While born a woman, living as a man proved to be a means by which the talented and dynamic musician, Billy Tipton, could achieve success in the male-dominated world of jazz.

The term intersex is used to describe a person whose biological sex is ambiguous. In "Size Matters" In the Life discovers in recent years, there has been a growing movement to empower intersex people to select the gender reflecting who they are and giving them the right to have that gender expression honored.

How do gender roles define us? How do we navigate a society where there is still great disparity between men and women...economically, sexually, and socially? "Binary Culture," a segment from 2005, begins to explore these questions as we talk to people about what gender means to us all.

On campuses across the country, students have always pushed the boundaries of Tradition. "Vanderbilt" takes us to Vanderbilt University where you'll meet Everett Moran, a leader among his fellow LGBT students.
